The Winthrop Wrought Iron Furnace.

Brick and Portable. 4 sizes Brick. 5 sizes Portable.

Simple and Durable in its Construction. A Easily Managed as a Parlor Stove. Large Radiation; Entire Freedom from Coal and Dust; Does not heat the Cellar.

Manufactured by DIGHTON FURNACE CO.

In the construction of the Winthrop Hot Air Furnace it has been made a study to avoid the difficulties and annoyances too often found in Furnaces. Pure warm air, free from gas and dust, is the great desideratum sought. Without enlarging upon the important matter of warming and ventilating houses, about which so much has been written of late, we desire to call your attention to the New Wrought Iron Winthrop Heater, as possessing the requisites for a healthful and economical apparatus.

The base and fire pot of the Winthrop, is made of heavy cast iron; the fire pot lined with brick, so that the current of cold air as it comes in from the base does not come in contact with red hot plates, destroying its vitality, but is delivered into the hot air chamber pure and healthful.

The Radiator is made of the best Wrought Iron, as thoroughly riveted as a steam boiler, making the escape of gas and dust an impossibility; thus securing, what cannot be guaranteed by any Cast Iron Furnace, with its many flues and joints, a healthful atmosphere.

The reversible flue insures the even distribution of heat over the whole furnace; leaving no part useless, thus making it the most powerful heater in the market. Another distinguishing feature of the Winthrop is the ease with which the flues can be cleaned out. This has been a serious difficulty with most furnaces, but has been entirely overcome in the Winthrop. The accumulation of soot and ashes in the flues can be thoroughly removed in a few minutes. The Winthrop has been thoroughly tested, and we invite all in want of a superior heating apparatus to an examination of its merits.

A man went into a barn at West Camden, Sept. 11th, filled and lighted his pipe and also lighted the barn. The barn, with fifteen tons of hay, farming utensils, etc., were all burned. No insurance. On the same evening the buildings formerly owned by Orrin Packard were burned to the ground. A family had just vacated the premises. Supposed incendiarism. Said to be insured.

Two young daughters of Mr. Isaac Perkins of Biddeford, have been missing since Wednesday evening. They were seen in company with a man named Freeman Cox and a woman named Mrs. Henrietta Cox Dean, who formerly boarded in the family of Mr. Perkins. She was turned away for not paying her board. Cox was anxious to keep company with the elder girl, aged fifteen, but the parents objected, and it is thought the girls have been enticed away by these parties in a spirit of revenge.

THE PROPOSED VETERAN ASSOCIATION

[From the Portland Press.]

The meeting of the various associations of Maine Veterans which have been held this summer and fall appear to have been more numerous and interesting than ever before. We are glad to see that at the reunion of the 1-10-29th Regiment Association at Norway the other day, preliminary steps were taken toward holding a general meeting of Maine veterans without reference to the organization to which they belonged. This project ought to be carried out. Besides the social enjoyment which would result from such a meeting, there are certain matters touching the fame of the war regiments and the comfort and happiness of their surviving members that might well engage the attention of such a general organization.

Full justice has never been done Maine's war record, and the proposed veteran association could not do better than to select some competent person to compile a succinct but comprehensive account of the deeds of Maine soldiers in the war. The state which sent fifty-three thousand men into the service, exclusive of those in the navy and regular army, and which contributed so many soldiers to the quota of other states, as to make her aggregate number greater in proportion to her population than any other state in the Union—the state whose troops never lost a flag and whose sons fell on every field, even from the Baltimore riot of April 19, 1861 to the final struggles in Virginia—ought to preserve with sacred care the fame and the glory of her soldiery. Nothing, to be sure, can be better fitted for this purpose than those wonderful reports of Adjutant General Hodsdon which, in a few more decades, will be held among their most highly prized treasures by their fortunate possessors. But the volumes of the reports are so numerous, cumbrous and at the same time scarce that they must be regarded rather as repositories of facts and authorities for reference than as a means of keeping alive a popular appreciation of the valor of our sold ers. Besides these reports there are the various regimental histories and the volume called "Maine in the war," by Messrs. Whitman and True, hastily compiled a few weeks after the close of hostilities. Of the former we believe there are now but four, viz: The First Maine Cavalry, by Chaplain S. H. Merrill; the seventeenth Maine, by Major Edwin B. Bicknell and the 1-10-29th Regiment by Major J. M. Gould. Of these histories but limited editions are printed and copies of two earlier ones, at least, are already exhausted. In a few years they will be hoarded by the survivors of the regiments whose stories they give and by curious collectors. There are of course few private libraries that could aspire to contain them all with those which in time will follow. All of these are excellent for the purpose for which they are designed, but what is wanted for popular reading is a compact and racy story told [illegible] volume and written by some soldier like Gen. Connor or Gen. Chamberlain, who have literary ability of a high order as well as a glorious military record, or Major Gould who made so entertaining a story of his regimental history.

A still more important subject for the consideration of the association would be the general care for veterans who have fallen into destitution and an appeal to the state in their behalf. These men are just saved, by the allowance at present made them by the state, from absolute pauperism. Though time may dull in some degree the keenness of the gratitude that was felt at the close of the war toward those who had saved the Republic, we cannot believe that Maine will ever turn a deaf ear to representation in behalf of her suffering veterans. But it seems that already an appeal is necessary to obtain what ought to be voluntarily offered.

"Not Very Well."

A feeling of vague bodily discomfort which [illegible] not amount to positive illness, and yet is incompatible with health, is often aptly described by the phrase, "Not very well." This feeling usually arises from a deficiency of the nervous power which is required to keep the vital machinery in vigorous and healthful operation. Nervous weakness has too frequently turned out to be the prelude of some serious malady to admit of any doubt in the matter. Inactivity of the bodily functions as surely begets their derangement as [illegible]

It is therefore absolutely essential for the preservation of health, perhaps of life itself, that this warning should be promptly heeded. The case does not admit of delay. Revitalize the system at once and effectually with Hostetter's Bitters—that peerless invigorant which, by infusing new health and strength into the system, protects it against disease more surely than ever, [illegible] of old was protected by armor of proof against the foe.

SHOW YOUR COLORS.

The Portland Press and the Bangor Commercial join in publishing "the best information" of the Portland Advertiser, in which it tries to figure out a majority against Mr. Hamlin. The Press is getting into strange company, and for one which claims to be a leading Republican paper is engaged in rather queer business when it quotes editorial paragraphs openly suggesting a coalition with the Democrats in the election of a United States Senator. The Press should certainly be as well informed as the Advertiser on so important a political matter, and if its editor is aware, as he ought to be and as we believe he is, that a very large majority of the Republican members-elect are in favor of the re election of Mr. Hamlin, we can see no excuse for such a quotation from the Advertiser without dissent or comment. We cannot believe that the chief editor of that paper carefully read the paragraph copied, for we do not think that he is willing, and we know that the Republicans of Western Maine, are not ready to sanction so shameful a proposition as that the choice of a United States Senator should be controlled by the Democratic minority rather than the Republican majority of the Maine Legislature, even if it were possible, which fortunately it is not.

The Advertiser has been wishing and is boring in its way for years, for the breaking-up of the Republican party, and whenever any of its personal favorites have failed of a nomination it would have preferred the election of a Democrat. Its position in this respect is well understood, and its readers are aware that if its personal favorite cannot get the election it would join with alacrity in putting a Democrat in the United States Senate. That paper, however, has obtained very little political influence and is very far from representing the sentiments and principles entertained by a very large majority of the people of Maine. The Press, on the contrary, owes its position and strength to the fidelity with which for years it identified itself with the Republicanism of the State. If it proposes to take a "new departure" at a time when the people of Maine have just given the most emphatic assurance of their steadfast adherence to the Republican party we should like to know it, and if it proposes to give the Democrats the benefit of the most important national result of our victory, the voters who have just given a Republican majority of over 11,500 would like to know it also.

This is a matter which affects the position of our contemporary very much more than it can possibly affect the Senatorial succession, for the candidate who should permit the proposal to coalesce with the Democrats to be put forward in his name, would be sent by the indignant voice of the Republicans to seek his election from the Democrats alone. We have the same right to speak of our own "best information" that the Advertiser has to parade its inferences, and we think there is far more justification for expressing our opinions plainly than for the Press to circulate the misleading and mischievous utterances of a paper hostile to the Republican party. And we state our belief, without fear of contradiction, that it is understood and conceded in the office of the Portland Press that a large majority of the Republicans elected to the next Legislature are in favor of and intend to support the re election of Hon. Hannibal Hamlin to the position in the National councils which he has so ably and faithfully filled.

With this unquestioning belief we cannot restrain our surprise at the peculiar course of our contemporary, but reserve our further comment until it shall plainly inform us where and how it stands upon a question of principle and political morals of vital importance to the party in whose central organization its editor holds an important post, and with which its career has been politically identified.

The Press has hitherto disavowed the championship of either of the Senatorial candidates, and if its tacit indorsement of the Advertiser's doctrines was not an inadvertence, as we still prefer to regard it, the public would be glad to know whether it is in the interest of Mr. Washburn, Mr. Drummond or Mr. Perham, that it so early counsels a bolt. We are certainly justified in asking our contemporary to show its colors.

SENATOR HAMLIN'S RE-ELECTION CONCEDED.

The Kennebec Journal, which has preserved a judicial impartiality during the Senatorial discussion, but which has kept well informed on the subject, in summing up the results of the election, announces the assurance of Mr Hamlin's re election, as follows

"The returns for members of the Legislature manifest the effect of the Senatorial question upon the result. It is now pretty accurately settled that parties in the House will stand: straight Republicans, 95, Democrats, Liberals, Independents, all shades of opposition, 56. The Senate will be, Republicans, 28, Democrats, 3. On joint ballot the straight Republican majority will be 67. Unprejudiced and well informed authorities agree that the re election of Mr. Hamlin to the United States Senate is settled beyond a doubt, a clean majority of the members elect being unequivocally in favor of his election. It was hoped by the Democracy that a sufficient division would exist among Republicans to enable the Democrats to hold the balance of power, but they are disappointed in this as well as in their vote upon Governor."

We must make just one more reference to the Commercial. Those who purchase that paper in the expectation of receiving the news, (if any person is simple enough to look for news in that quarter), have been told over and over since the late election that the Republican majority has been reduced since last year; that "facts must stand" and "Dingley must be content with 9,500 majority." They have also been repeatedly told that this paper was falsifying about the vote, and perhaps some of them believed it. If so they are not likely to have any assistance from the Commercial in finding out their error. Yesterday morning we laid before our readers the full official returns from all but forty-four small places in the State, which we had taken pains to obtain from official sources through the courtesy of the Kennebec Journal, and those returns show a majority of 11,552 for Dingley, a large increase over last year's vote. With the official figures thus furnished for the use of the Commercial without expense or trouble, it has failed even to mention the returns which convict it of falsehood and false accusation. The readers of that paper must value it very highly.

The Augusta Journal don't "care worth a cent." It appears as usual and smiling at the petty malice displayed in the onset of its editors, tells Mr. Yose to go "ahead with his little game."

In view of the recent political alliance of Mr. [illegible] with the Democracy, the Waterville [illegible] to his defeats and is damagingly suggestive in referring to him as in danger of [illegible] being "smothered in the rum puddles of augusta." We should think that rather an unfortunate fate for a temperance reformer.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The Kennebec Journal publishes the following table from the official returns for Representatives to the Legislature, received up to Saturday night, leaving twelve districts yet to be heard from:

	Republican.	Democrat.	Independent.	Citizen's.	Returns not complete.	Total.
Androscoggin	6	1				9
Aroostook,	1	1	3		2	7

RECAPITULATION.

Republican,	88

Independent,	4
Citizen,	2

From the twelve districts incomplete, returns received indicate that seven members will be Republicans and five Democrats. If Johnson be defeated in Aroostook the Democrats will have three Senators, so that on joint ballot the vote will probably stand 123 Republicans, 53 Democrats and 6 Independents, who are also understood to be Republicans

STEADY REPUBLICAN GAINS.

[From the Kennebec Journal.]

Comparing the vote this year with that of 1870, both years being alike in the fact that elections for Congressmen took place, at a period of time equally distant from a Presidential election, and the result is as follows:

Dingley's majority in 1874,		11,552
Perham's "	1870,	8,248
Republican gain,		3,304

The total vote cast in 1870 was 99,790 against a total vote in 1874 of 98,839 (adding 2350 for the towns not returned.) Thus it will be seen that on a less total vote this year than in 1870 we have cast a larger Republican majority—a result quite unusual in our political history, and very significant of the sound and improving condition of the Republican party in the State. The Democracy will look in vain at the returns from Maine this year for any sign of that reaction against Republicanism which they pretend to discover. They will find instead substantial evidence of Republican gain and growth. If they take the vote on Congressmen, the Republican majorities indicate a firm support of the national Government and the national issues that the Republican party stands upon.

A look at the vote by counties shows that the Republicans lose in six counties and gain in ten. Our heaviest loss is in Cumberland and York counties where local divisions injured the Republican ticket. Our loss in other counties is small. The indication is that our gains are general, our losses local; the former of a permanent character, the latter transient.

The disappearance of an Independent ticket for Governor this year is one of the features which distinguishes the result from that of 1873. The Independents, or Liberals, call them what you may, have become merged in the two great parties, their brief race having ended as we supposed it would. The leaders have mostly gone over to the Democracy, where they intended to go at the start; the rank and file have returned to the Republican party.

LETTER FROM SOUTH CAROLINA

FALSE TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS—THE NOMINATION OF CHAMBERLAIN IN THE INTEREST OF REFORM

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 17, 1874

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier

The Agent of the Associated Press in this city is one of those Democratic editors who has been in secret sympathy with certain corrupt Republicans here in times past. The present leading portion of the party (the advocates of Chamberlain) not only refuse to buy off Democratic opposition, but will not spend money to buy any votes. Hence the coloring given to the reports telegraphed all over the country, and hence the protracted struggle in the nominating convention.

Had Chamberlain promised Moses any office or help of any sort, he could have been nominated by acclamation the first day. Or if he would assist Mackey, in Charleston, to a seat in Congress, there would be no bolt now.

Probably for the first time in many years a candidate for Governor of South Carolina has been nominated without purchased votes Is not this hopeful? But don't believe the lies which have even found their way into Republican quarters. Give your countenance and sympathy to real reform in South Carolina. H. C. L.

It is reported that one hundred thousand cattle have perished from the effects of the drought in the two districts alone of the Argentine Republic, San Pero and Baraderes.

A person supposed to be King Orelic was captured among the Indians at Patagonia, and is in custody at Buenos Ayres. The prisoner denies that he is the pretender, and says his name is Juan Dupras.

The Chicago City Council, Monday night, passed an amended fire ordinance, which not only prohibits the erection of wooden buildings within the city limits, but prescribes a heavy fine for violation of the law.

A fire in West Pittsburg Monday destroyed five frame and two brick houses and three spans of the Pan Handle railroad, bridge across Saw-Mill Run. Loss to the company, $15,000; no insurance. Insurance on the buildings, $4000.

The city of Buenos Ayres is a military camp, with the enemy in front, and a battle is imminent. The soldiers in the city are on the watch night and day. While the President of the Republic, Governor of the city, and Chief of Police were holding a conference in secret, they were informed that a revolution was on the eve of breaking out, and all the forces were put under arms.

During the campaign of 1872 one of his Democratic followers wrote to Horace Greeley inquiring if guano was good to put on potatoes. He said it might do for those whose tastes had become vitiated with tobacco and rum, but he preferred gravy and butter.

REVERDY JOHNSON'S OPINIONS OF THE LOUISIANA REBELLION

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 The Herald publishes a lengthy reply of Reverdy Johnson to ... from James Gordon Bennett asking ... views on the Louisiana difficulty Mr ... thinks that the President erred in ... the Kellogg Government origin... being misled by the judgment or decree of the U S District Court of that State. The ... whether a State Government is legitimately established, he says, is not a judicial, a political one, as was established in the case of the Dorr Rebellion in Rhode Island having recognized the Kellogg Govern[ment] whether right or wrong, the President's ... was final, and there was no legality ... for a resort to force or revolution to upset it. The President was bound to put down such an attempt and to restore the Kellogg Government, but if any of the officers under the Kellogg Government ... neglect to assume their offices, he ... the President has no power to compel them to do so, nor has he the power to appoint others to fill their places. Mr Johnson therefore, thinks that the best solution of the difficulty would be for Kellogg and McEnery and the Lieut. Governors under them to resign and submit to a new election.

The address of Mayor Moses H Goodrich was a very brief business-like document, occupying but five minutes in delivery. He deprecates the increase of city expenses and taxes of late years, and recommends retrenchment and economy in all departments. The city debt is $171,700 bearing in part five, but mostly six per cent. interest, having been reduced about $5,000 this year There are besides $300,000 of Portsmouth & Dover railroad city bonds. No orders have been issued by the President through the War Department this week as there is nothing to render them necessary.

NO NEWS—THE DELEGATION IN WASHINGTON ADVISED TO GO HOME.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 A Washington special says that there are no despatches from New Orleans to-day, and the authorities are sanguine that Kellogg will not be molested Advice has been given to the Republican delegation from Louisiana, now here, that their presence in their own district at this juncture might redound to the good of the party, and be an effectual answer to the charges of cowardice brought against them. Adherents of Kellogg, who arrived to day from New Orleans, assert that not disbanded, and is merely waiting for a favorable opportunity to renew hostilities These stories are not credited in Administration circles, although it is well known that it extends throughout the South, and that it is well armed It is believed that the fear of the Federal Government will restrain the organization from resorting to further bloodshed.

DOLE BROTHERS' MANUFACTORY

ENLARGEMENT OF THE ESTABLISHMENT AND INCREASE OF FACILITIES.

Holding rank among the leading business institutions of the city is the furniture manufactory and sales rooms of the Dole Brothers, on Hammond street, nearly opposite the Court House. The firm consists of the Messrs. William B. and James A. Dole, and has been located at this same place for nine years. In that time their work has become so well-known and in such general demand that the present season found their former capacious building entirely inadequate to their uses. Accordingly, during the past summer the work of enlargement was accomplished; the wooden building adjoining the brick store and manufactory, was raised three feet, giving higher walls on the first floor, and two stories, including a Mansard roof, were added. The entire establishment now has a frontage of about 80 feet by 70 feet in depth, with five stories and basement in height. In addition to this, there is a building connecting at the rear, about 22 by 60 feet on the ground, which contains a drying room and rooms for storage.

The machinery is run by an engine of 35 horse-power, which also furnishes power to Stevens, the jeweller, next door. The Dole Brothers have a score of employes, and manufacture nearly all the furniture sold by them, which includes parlor, chamber and dining room sets, of which they have several favorite styles of their own, and the filling of special orders for any sort of furniture for offices, churches, public buildings and private residences.

The Lowell Courier gives it up, and says: This Beecher-Tilton matter has got to that point where forbearance to publish becomes virtuous. Tilton's last is too long to publish in full, and to thin to attempt to boil down.

The Society of the Army of the Cumberland, which has been in session at Columbus, Ohio, determined on a statue to the memory of their commander, General Thomas, to cost $50,000 and to be completed within three years. General Sheridan was elected President for the ensuing year. These veteran soldiers also transmitted word to the President, through the Secretary of War, who was present at the gathering, endorsing and commending his course in regard to New Orleans.

—The Bangor Band "bayed the moon" last night.

—What can a croaker say against this weather?

—The State Fair has hit the weather about right.

—The race track was never in so fine a condition as now.

—Brewer contributed four cases to the Bangor lock-up yesterday.

—An amateur frost nipped the expectations of gardeners, on Monday night.

—The bark T. Jeffie Southard, of this city which arrived in Liverpool on the 20th inst., made the run in 16 days

—Mr. Charles Marse was injured on Monday by the spar of a derrick on the Bucksport & Bangor railroad bridge.

—One hundred and five dollars are offered in purses for the trot which comes off at Lincoln a week from to-day.

—It is stated that pool selling for the races next week will be conducted by R T Williams, at the Franklin House,

—St. John has opened an employment bureau. There is no telling what a Saint will not do in these degenerate days

—There is no reason why anyone should not go to a horse trot, since "Martin Luther" is to participate in the races next week

—A trip to Moosehead is the correct thing. If you can't possibly go that far, take a walk around one of the sewer holes in Main street.

—Among other celebrities entered for next week's races are "Jim Fisk" and "Olive Logan." The former, at least, ought to be fast

—They are advertising the "diamond cure" in New Brunswick! No one around this office has anything of that sort that needs curing.

—Gay pigments are flaunting their advertisements in the forests, and Solomon, with all his lilies, was not arrayed like a medium-sized maple bush.

—The Calais Times prints a notice of the great stallion race as local news Has that town, also, become one of the suburban spokes of the Hub?

—A beautiful bouquet mysteriously found its way to the desk of the City Editor, yesterday, and he finds it quite impossible to say anything mean about anybody to-day.

—Norombega Lodge, K. of P., of this city, have been invited to be present at the Centennial of '76 and parade, and the invitation will probably be responded to by a full representation.

—A number of gentlemen, including some of the leading capitalists and financiers of the city, made a visit to Fitz Pond on yesterday, in connection with the projected water-supply for this city.

—That poor blind artist who performed violin solos in front of the postoffice yesterday afternoon, must also be deaf, or the possessor of a copper lined, pandemonium-proof tympanum. No charges.

—Vaccination is said to be unpopular in England, and the virus of American ideas is the worst of all. On the Provinces east of us, on the contrary, liberality of sentiment and practical progress are always noticeable —The Managers of the Old Ladies' Home wish to return thanks to the Rev. R. Thomas, for his lecture given at City Hall on Monday evening for the benefit of the institution, from which they realized the sum of $105.

—Mr. Francis Murphy will deliver an address at City Hall to-night, on the occasion of a public temperance meeting by the Reform Club. He spoke in Town Hall, Orono, on Monday evening, and his lecture was well received.

—At the meeting of the Young Men's Crusade Club, on last evening, there were select readings, vocal music and speeches by members of the organization. The next public meeting will be held on Monday evening next.

—If you wish to become a bloated landowner for a small cash investment, remember the auction sale of State Lands at City Hall, 10 o'clock this forenoon. The sale will include from a quarter of a million to half a million acres.

—Mr. John Wills, "the industrious truckman" of Houlton, as the Aroostook Pioneer delicately calls him, has recently hauled to that office the ages of the oldest inhabitants of that town, 42 in number, ranging from 72 to 99 years each.

—The Queen City Brace Company are among the prominent Bangor exhibitors at the State Fair. Think those people in Lewiston must "brace up," perhaps, if they want to have as good a show as Bangor got up during the two years past?

—S. N Stockwell, Esq, the energetic and wide-awake editor of the Boston Journal was in town last evening, and made a pleasant call at our office. He is taking a brief vacation, and leaves this morning for St. John and Calais to visit friends in those places

—The jockeys who have horses in training at the course have not decided whether it will be advisable to make a record of 2.13, or 3:13, but that sixty seconds margin makes just the difference between a "plug" and a horse worth a thousand dollars a second.

—Some enthusiastic individual, impressed with the future importance of Bangor as a railroad center, entertains the idea that those openings along Main street are the embryonic entrances to a direct inside line to China. The sanguine party referred to is mistaken.

—Improvements in progress in the sidewalk fronting the WHIG AND COURIER office, rendered it difficult of access during yesterday. There is a chance for a fifteen-foot drop, and the individual who calls in "just to borrow a copy of to day's paper" is duly warned of the danger.

—At about 10 o'clock last night, Frank Murphy got into a row in the house of Thomas Milet, on Hancock street, resulting in considerable damage to himself. He was taken by his mother and brother to his home on Birch street, insensible from the effects of his injuries, or of liquor. No arrests.

—Lovers of good music will read with pleasure the advertisement of the Bangor Band for their concert, which is to be given in Norombega Hall, Oct. 8; and one does not require more than a single horse-power imagination to hear in his soul's ear, Horatio, a burst of melody worth about fourteen times the admission price.

—Tommie McDonald, aged fourteen years, has been arrested for kicking up a row around an apple tree, and for knocking apples off Miss Trecarten's school, or something of that sort, Of course he was found guilty, and was not allowed a choice between Jamaica Ginger and the Reform School, because sentence was suspended.

—At Veazie village, a Mr. Thompson has in a living spring a tame brook trout, that will come at his call, and otherwise shows appreciation of kindness. This gentleman formerly had another pet of the same aquatic predilections, which died about a year ago, after achieving a weight of four pounds and a place in the affections of its owner that would require an ordinary child to fill.

—The WHIG AND COURIER is informed that at a conference held yesterday between the representatives of the European & North American Railway, and of the State, satisfactory arrangements were made by which all controversies between said parties are amicably adjusted, so that parties purchasing at the State Land sale, which takes place at the City Hall to-day, will incur no risk.

—The Bucksport and Bangor Railroad Co. has receipted for the rails attached by Col. Gowan in his suit vs. the Company, so that they will be laid at once. The case will be brought to trial at the term of the United States Circuit Court which begins at Portland this week. U. S. District Attorney Webb, Judge Goddard and S. C. Strout, Esq, being counsel for Col. Gowan, and J S. Rowe, Esq., and F. A Wilson, Esq, of this city, for the Company.

CONGREGATIONALISM IN MAINE. The minutes of the General Conference of Congregationalists, just printed, give the following statistics: Number of churches, 241, one less than 1873; 16,489 membership, gain 133. Contributions $39,451 not including legacies There are but 59 settled pastors. The average age of the 177 ordained ministers 23 years and of the 37 without charge, 25 years—There are 23,327 in the Sunday schools; 144 infant baptisms; 60 churches have no pastor and 127 report no addition. The Scribe of the Conference, Deacon E. F. Duren, of this city, has served 25 years with signal fidelity, and the report of 1874 is a model of neatness and accuracy.

PROPOSED VETERAN ASSOCIATION. We copy on our first page to-day an article from the Portland Press with reference to the proposed formation of an association of veterans of the late war, the preliminary steps toward which were taken at the recent Norway reunion of the 1–10–29th Regiments. The article sets forth the objects of such an association, and will be read with interest by all who desire to preserve the memory of the patriotic services of Maine's citizen-soldiers. The article urges the importance of securing a comprehensive history of Maine's participation in the great national conflict, and refers in terms of just appreciation to the valuable and wonderfully accurate Reports compiled by Adjutant General Hodsdon, and to several private works on Maine military history, as affording a basis for the under taking Such a work would be a worthy tribute to the patriotism of our State.

PEDAGOGUES AS PUPILS

SECOND DAY OF THE PENOBSCOT COUNTY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE AT ORONO.

FORENOON.

The morning exercises, yesterday, were conducted by J. H. French, LL D., after which were some general remarks concerning the work to be done during the week, and the history of "The Institute." The remaining portion of the hour was spent in giving hints to young teachers how to open, organize and conduct their first school. They were advised never to prepare a programme beforehand unless they know what kind of a school they are to teach. Have some respect for the preceding teacher, and assume that he did his work well. Do not always begin with the first page in the book. Find out the former classification of the school, begin where the former teacher left off, and conduct the school on his organization for a few days Then, as the condition of the several scholars becomes known, the organization can be perfected, and every scholar put to work where he will be likely to do the best.

Next followed a lesson on drawing, by Prof. Luce, continuing the exercise of the first day. Drawing is not the making of pictures, but is the outlining and visible representation of form. Each step is to be an intelligent one, not, copying, but a building up of original figures, according to directions given verbally by the teacher. This expression was illustrated by various sketches upon the blackboard

After a recess, Dr. French gave instructions in oral lessons in geography. A good method takes into account the knowledge already possessed by the child, and the lesson begins where his present knowledge ends Commence with local geography—that of the school district, the town, county and State. An oral lesson of ten minutes daily will give a child a fair knowledge of the local geography of his section in a single term. Lessons are given in

I Directions: 1, East, because the sun rises there, and West, the opposite point, 2. North and South; these will be sufficient for one lesson; 3, four intermediate points,—it will take a week for ordinary pupils to become thoroughly familiar with all of them.

II. Distances: Every school room should have a yardstick and a foot rule for use of pupils, and they should be taught how to use them. In distances they should learn —1, short,—the inch, foot and yard; 2, longer,—the rod and mile. They should be shown how to compute short and long distances, to measure them in the schoolroom, the school yard, and along highways.

III. Map of schoolroom.

IV. Map of school district and some of principal objects in it.

V. Surface: 1, Land; 2, Water.

VI. Land divisions: 1, plain; 2, hill; 3, mountain—(instruct about, 1, base or foot; 2, side or slope; 3, summit, crest, or top, 4, range or chain); 4, valley; 5, gorge or ravine.

These are all taught from actual objects, if possible, and definitions thoroughly learned. In this way an entire school year can be used to advantage without any text book whatever in the hands of the pupils, and valuable knowledge gained which will be of use in after life.

AFTERNOON.

Dr. French opened with remarks as to the permanent organization of the school. A well organized school is, ordinarily speaking, a well governed school. This includes the laying out of the work for the scholar in the seat as well as in the recitation class, and controls the length of the time devoted to recitations. Pestalozzi, that old master of pedagogy, said we must give no more instruction than the pupils can receive; therefore the least instruction should be given to the smallest, more to the larger, and so on through the five grades usually found in our public schools. As the young child requires small quantities of food often, so should we give instruction at frequent intervals. We would divide our scholars into the five grades according to age, generally as follows:

1, children from 4 to 8 years of age, 5 to 10 minutes; 2, from 8 to 10 years, 8 to 15 minutes; 3, from 10 to 12 years, 10 to 20 minutes; 4, from 12 to 15 years, 15 to 30 minutes; 5, over 15 years, 20 to 40 minutes.

The First class includes all who read in the Primer, First and Second Readers, who take oral lessons in local geography and primary arithmetic, and have eight class exercises daily. The Second class read in Third Reader, study text books on same subjects, and four daily recitations. The Third class read in Fourth Reader, study same with grammar added, making six recitations daily. The Fourth class read in the higher books, and add History and several branches to the other studies, making, also, six daily recitations. This is about what is done now in Maine. One fourth of the time of the school day is consumed in general exercises, moving classes, opening school, recess, writing, drawing and miscellaneous. A programme should therefore be made, stating the studies pursued, length of time devoted to each, and time of beginning and ending of each recitation. The number of classes may be reduced by recitation on topics, when there are different text books, and by a judicious consolidation.

At 3 o'clock, Mr Luce gave another lesson in drawing. The first great law of design is formulated in this expression: "Symmetrical arrangement of parts around a common center." Instrumental is usually taught with free-hand drawing. This requires in a common school only a lead pencil, eraser, white wrapping paper and a measuring stick 6 inches in length. These can all be procured at a trifling expense, and are considerable aids to discipline.

At 4 o'clock, Mr. French spoke of the meaning of instruction in writing. In this State writing does not receive the attention it deserves. There ought to be systematic instruction in this branch as well as others Any one of the systems now in public use is better than the handwriting of the ordinary teacher. We need no ornamentation but a plain, systematic construction of the letters. The alphabet should be classified somewhat after this style:

1, Short letters as a, m, u, r, , 2, stem letters as d, t, q, p, 3, loop letters as l, h, g, f then adopt a standard of criticism.

I. All letters of the same class should be of the same height.

II. All down strokes in the same element should be parallel

III. The spacing between down strokes should be uniform, observing this rule Parallel down strokes should be one space apart To this general rule however there are one or two exceptions,—1, b s, ll, ff, and the compound curve between l and n require one and a half space, 2, the v finish requires but one-half space. So good writing should be uniform in height, sloping and spacing.

THE COMING RACES

AN UNEXPECTEDLY LARGE NUMBER OF ENTRIES, AND EXCELLENT PROSPECTS FOR A GOOD MEETING.

The entries for the Fall Meeting of the Bangor Trotting Park Association are closed, and the full list will be found in the advertisement in this morning's issue. Every purse has been filled, and for the six events which are evenly divided among the three days, there are a total of fifty-five entries, thereby insuring each of the trots announced on the programme, after allowing for a certain per cent. that is invariably drawn in all races. The first day's programme includes a purse of $400 for horses that have never beaten 2:37, with 8 entries; and a purse of $300 for horses that have never beaten 3 minutes, with 12 entries. The two purses for the second day are, $350 for horses that have never beaten 2:40, 10 entries; and $450 for horses that have never beaten 2:34, 5 entries The purses for the third and last day offer $500 for horses that have never beaten 2 30. 13 entries, and a grand sweepstakes of $700 for all horses. with 7 entries.

Among the horses named it will be noticed there are several from a distance, and a number of well-known animals. The best races are promised to be trotted on the first day, so that all lovers of the turf should be present at the opening without fail. The names of the gentlemen connected with the Association in an official capacity are a sufficient guaranty that everything will be conducted honorably and aboveboard, and that they are determined that those who participate in the races shall be made responsible for the manner in which they conduct themselves, it is only necessary to state that the Managers have already applied for admission to membership in the National Association, the excellent rules of which organization will be enforced here.

As previously announced, half fare rates will be given by all boats and railroads running to this city, to those attending the races, including the Maine Central, according to information given at this office yesterday. The track is being put in thorough condition, and there is good reason to anticipate a large attendance at the Park on Tuesday next.

"THE FAMILY OF CROAKERS."

The lecture by Rev. Mr. Thomas, of London, England, took place at City Hall, on Monday evening, for the benefit of the Old Ladies' Home, according to announcement. The announcement was at so late an hour, and the opportunities of advertising the lecture in any way were so limited, that those who originated the movement were surprised at its complete success. Some time before the appointed hour the hall was filled with an audience as numerous as the room would hold, and as respectable in character and intelligence as the city could furnish, and they were amply rewarded for their attendance.

He spoke first of domestic croakers, and drew in a most telling way a picture of a home made wretched by the surly, complaining temper of the father, and the contrasted picture of the cheerfulness and happiness of a home where only loving words were spoken.

In speaking of the ecclesiastical croaker, he made a distinction between the reformer and the croaker, the former attacking systems and the latter persons. Many things in this part of the lecture were evidently written for those who have to contend with terrible ecclesiastical abuses of which we fortunately are ignorant, yet they were not without their application to us, especially where he spoke of that class of croakers doubtless to be found everywhere, who contrive to insinuate suspicions of good men without directly speaking against them. His definition of the Jesuit as one who can speak the truth so as to make it lie, will cover a great many who are not called Jesuits, but who belong to sects very bitterly opposed, as they suppose, to Jesuitism. We were made to see that the man who can tell a truth in words, and lie all the time by the tone of the voice, the shrug of the shoulders, is the chief of croakers, the most accomplished of fortune-tellers, and the most dangerous of enemies.

Under the head of political croakers, he described a class (quite as much American again as English) who injure every good cause by their unwillingness to recognize what is good in the institutions which they would reform, and by their readiness to rush into evils infinitely worse than those they would correct, comparing them to the physician who would heal his patient's gout by cutting his throat. He spoke plainly of the need which England had of reform—of temperance reform—of game-law reform—of land reform—of church reform—of reform of monopolies of all kinds, and yet declared, in a style as eloquent as I was English, his admiration of his country's constitution, and his preference to have it, with all its faults, rather than to incur the risk of French revolutions, French morals, French Sundays or French homes. The audience evidently sympathized with his preference to the full, and gave a most hearty response to his thrilling declaration.

In this connection, speaking of international croakers, he spoke of the efforts of a class of persons to stir up trouble between England and America, especially during our civil war. He spoke of an influential minority of England who took that opportunity of our terrible peril to croak out their venomous hate, and by their influence over the press and their aristocratic position, to misrepresent the real feeling of England, and declared that in that hour of our sore trial the nonconformist clergymen (of whom he was one) almost to a man stood faithful to the old cause of freedom; and, though preaching on the side was more rare and dangerous in England, then with us, yet they were ready to quit their pulpits rather than the silent on the great question, and their pulpits rang with as fearless a spirit, as ever animated Clarkson or Garrison. He said that doubtless there were certain interests in England which hated America, and always would.

To the aristocracy the political equality is a constant menace to the State Church, or a Free Church is a perpetual threat. But these interests he declared were as hostile to the people of England as to those of America. The masses of England were with us heart and soul during our great struggle and they are still with us. I have lectured week by week, he said for the last ten years, in all parts of England, and I never yet uttered the sentence, may England and America march arm in arm together, till Freedom and Christianity triumph everywhere, but every heart seemed to thrill with the sentiment. A hearty expression of good will to America and desire for perpetual peace and harmony, never went unapplauded by an English audience

This is a most meagre and hasty sketch of a most admirable lecture. Again and again the audience were thrilled by the stirring words. We are persuaded that nothing could do so much to bind the two nations together, as the frequent appearance in our cities of Englishmen of such spirit as the lecturer. We regret that he is about to leave our city just as our people are beginning to find out what kind of man has been among us, and we sincerely hope that his visit to America may give him half as much pleasure as his words have given many people among us, and that he will be tempted to repeat it at the earliest period possible

TRUE STATE OF AFFAIRS AT THE SOUTH

THE PRESS REPORTS UNTRUSTWORTHY—CENSORSHIP IN NEW ORLEANS—BITTER HOSTILITY IN THE GULF STATES

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal gives the following account of the actual condition of affairs in Louisiana, the outrages perpetrated by the insurgents, and the disorders in other parts of the South.

REIGN OF TERROR IN NEW ORLEANS

Several gentlemen of prominence have arrived here from New Orleans this morning They state that the Associated Press reports have given no adequate conception of the condition of affairs in Louisiana the last two weeks.

Directly the insurgent movement was successful, a rigid press, telegraph and news censorship was established which was maintained until Wednesday night.

They state that the despatches of Gen Emory more nearly represent the actual situation. There has been a reign of blood and terror, and these gentlemen are by no means assured of a peaceful outcome of it

A BITTERLY HOSTILE FEELING STILL EXISTING

They state that the opinion in the Gulf States through which they passed is bitterly hostile to the United States Government The spirit of Gen. Toombs prevails there The people openly say that they intend to oppose the transit of United States troops through Southern territory. They appear to have no apprehension of the determined purpose of the Executive or of the sentiment of the North.

OUTRAGES BY THE LOUISIANA WHITE LEAGUES.

The interference of the White League with the telegraph in New Orleans during the recent disturbances is fully confirmed by the persons who are now daily arriving from that city. Directly upon the outbreak of hostilities a so-called committee of citizens took possession of the telegraph office, and established a complete censorship over all press and private messages. This censorship was maintained until Wednesday night last. This committee in addition to supervising or withholding all telegraphic matter presented during those days, also took copies of all the telegrams from political persons or the Government which have passed through that office during the last three or four years.

A gentleman now in this city has the names of the persons constituting this committee, and they have been furnished to the Government authorities Some of these telegrams have doubtless been secured for blackmailing purposes.

THE TENNESSEE DISORDERS.

The President and Cabinet have carefully considered the protest of Gov. Brown of Tennessee against the trial of the perpetrators of the recent outrages in that State by United States Courts. The President has decided that the United States Courts have full jurisdiction of the subject, and that the recent orders issued to the U. S. Marshals by the Attorney-General must be executed. This action has been rendered necessary by the condition of other Southern States than Tennessee. The President is fully advised that in the other States where outrages have been perpetrated the State Governments are either unwilling or unable to bring the perpetrators to justice.

OUTRAGES ON NEGROES IN ALABAMA.

Despatches have been received here showing that another massacre of negroes has occurred in Sumter county, Ala, where six negroes were recently murdered. This fact having been brought to the attention of the Government the Secretary of War has ordered the troops in that section of Alabama not to proceed to New Orleans, as they had been directed. A detachment of troops was ordered to proceed immediately to the scene of the outrages.

BALLOT STUFFING IN CAMDEN. The Camden Herald a neutral paper, confirms the statements of the Eastport Sentinel as to the disgraceful proceedings at the election in Camden. Both papers state that the Democratic officials openly violated the Statutes against illegal voting by placing in the ballot box the vote of a person decided by the first selectman not qualified, to vote, and that the proceedings at the polls throughout the day were scandalous. The Herald says:

To say the least the election was a disgrace to Camden; and what did it? Rum! Yes, Rum did it. We venture to say that without rum it would have passed off quietly and pleasantly, and only with as much zeal as comes from honest rivalry. How long shall we see such elections? How long shall we suffer them? How long shall we endure them?

A free-trade plank which was to have been put in the Massachusetts Democratic platform isn't there, and everybody is asking Colonel Green of the Boston Post what he did with it. Any man who would feloniously purloin Democratic timber in that way, in order to give it to other parties, ought to be ashamed of himself.—Indianapolis Sentinel

MY RIVER.

BY HELEN BARRON BOSTWICK.

Sing out, laugh out, O river, glad and new—
Sing out, ring out, the wooded gorges through,
Sing, sing, and bring from meadows, morning sweet,
The slippery shadows on your silver feet.
Your fairy shallops glitter in the sun,
And deftly row the rowers, all as one.

Sing louder river for the moon is high
And swifter speed the frightened barges by,
And deftly row the rowers as they sing
"That which we bear away we never bring"

O river westering towards an unseen tide,
Your slowing current melts the yielding side
And heavily row the rowers as they feel
The long waves lapsing underneath the keel,
Sing low, sing low O river, winding slow,
The sea is near—the darkness falls—sing low!

OUR EVENING PARTY

(Concluded.)

Long shall I be in forgetting the preparations and fuss of that dreary evening,—the hurried tea, the laborious dressing, the solemn single knock of the upholsterer's men, like the undertaker bringing a coffin, the frantic appeals of Sarah to "come and fasten me," the rustle of skirts in the passages, the flying about of distracted cook and housemaid, the staid, methodical movements of the long-visaged waiters. But as the clock struck the fatal hour of 9, we were all assembled in state ready for the first comer, my wife buttoning her white kid gloves, and still red in the face with her nervousness and exertions. As a proof that her exertions had been attended with some success, I may state that I overheard one of our young barristers telling Northcost "She looked a very handsome Dutch Venus indeed."

I had scarcely taken my place on the hearth-rug when a loud rantan at the door and a hearty voice in the passage announced the first arrival. "Mr. Wotherspoon!" whispered my wife to me, with a touch of annoyance in her tone, "he at any rate, takes care to be punctual—knows no better, I suppose." When he was ushered in by one of the imitation footmen he took much the same view of our proceedings as I took myself, and began chaffing me in his free and easy way "Well, now, Miller, to think of you coming out in such a swell fashion! What on earth possessed you to begin giving state parties, eh?" But Mrs. Miller, with that increase of dignity which the peach-colored satin always gives her, cut his audacious levity short by asking sharply "Well and why shouldn't we give a party like any one else, Mr —a— Mr Wotherspoon? The assumed forgetfulness of his name was a masterpiece, and capitally done considering she had never practiced the art of snubbing before. At all events, poor Dick seemed to have the ground taken from under him at once and he subsided into a corner near Patty, where he seemed to be better welcomed.

But hark! the roll of wheels—"the brazen thunders of the door"—soon not intermittent, but continuous—and we are presently in the thick of it. Kelly came about 10, a little stiffer than usual, but not till half past did the Vyners sweep into the room, Mrs. Vyner overwhelmingly courteous and patronizing in her black velvet dress. But she soon contrived (without saying so) to make us understand that she wondered we could venture to invite her, and that she considered it no little condescension on her part to come.

There could be no doubt that my daughter Molly and Ellen Vyner were the prettiest girls in the room. Yet it was amusing to note the difference in their style and appearance. Molly, whose good natured, rosy face above her light blue dress seemed like a cherub floating in the sky, was radiant, full of life, and sweet as a new blown rose, but she was a little too eager to please, and tried too evidently to make everything go off well. Miss Vyner, on the other hand—pale, slight, and with finely-chiseled features—moved through the rooms a very statue of dignity and self-possession. Quiet, perfectly well bred and polite, she rather discouraged the advances of her admirers, including Kelly, but her very discouragement seemed only to make them more attentive. If she had a fault, it was that she evidently knew her own value so well, she might have been a duke's daughter instead of a brewer's, though, indeed I believe Vyner and many of his business think a brewer or a banker, now-a-days, a greater grandee than any nobleman.

I am glad to say the party itself, notwithstanding our misgivings, went off without any peculiar hitch. In fact, it seemed very like thousands of affairs given by people of the middle classes who know no better— There was the same stiffness and reserve at first, since in such a miscellaneous gathering very few of the guests were acquainted with each other; the same gradual thawing as we got up a little dance, (which, with hypocrisy that deceived nobody, we pretended to extemporize), the same intense heat in the rooms the same jamming in the doorways, the same forlorn groups in the corners, groups that looked as if they knew they ought to be enjoying themselves and were not.

And when the novelty of the position wore off, I did not find it very difficult to play the part of host. So I tried to say a pleasant word to any guest that seemed dull, arranged a couple of whist tables for the elderly people and in fact worked hard generally at amusing everybody. My wife, however, as the hours went on without mishap, grew prouder and prouder of her hired grandeur and indeed, like old Weller's shepherd, "swelled visibly" in magnificence of deportment and manner. In my hearing alone she told six different persons that "there were forty five invited, but unfortunately so many were engaged."

"I think you ought rather to say fortunately" replied that disagreeable Mrs. Vyner, as my wife made this remark to her. "My dear Mrs. Miller, how could you get any more people into these rooms? And a crowd is so very unpleasant," she added fanning herself vigorously.

When I took Mrs. Vyner in to supper, she said blandly "I did not know, Mr. Miller—yes, champagne, please—I never knew before that you kept a footman," looking hard at one of the upholsterer's mutes.

Why he is like Vyner's small ale—for very occasional use only," I replied, determined she should not have all the sarcasms to herself, and knowing she hated any reference to her husband's business."

She took her revenge, however, on my wife by saying to her soon afterward across the table. "How very nice these whips are, Mrs. Miller I must get you to give me the receipt." Of course, the odious woman knew very well that the creams, like everything else were furnished by the upholsterer "who did for us;" but she succeeded in making my wife blush and feel very uncomfortable for the time.

The dance was kept up with spirit till 4 or 5 o'clock, and the young people at, any rate, especially my daughters, Molly and Patty, enjoyed this part of the business most thoroughly. Toward the end however, Molly became rather sulky because Fred danced so much with Miss Vyner, and my wife was highly indignant at Dick Wotherspoon's hanging about Patty. Indeed, she would almost have proceeded to open hostilities if I had not stopped her, and, and as it was, Wotherspoon evidently guessed her motive in always disturbing his confabulations with Patty, and left early.

When our guests were gone we were soon in bed from which we did not rise till noon. Even then Patty was very tired and Molly had a headache—due to Miss Vyner, I suspected, I, too, was disgusted with the hypocritical pretenses and bother of the whole thing. My wife alone was radiant, and thought the party a great success, owing to her own admirable management. She was sure, too, that Kelly on leaving had thanked her, and pressed her hand with a cordiality most unusual with him, on this ground she told Molly to take courage, and all would come right.

And her exultation was increased by several of our guests, who called, in the afternoon, and repeated the usual phrases on such an occasion. "Delightful gathering" "Enjoyed ourselves so much." "Quite a success"

When Mrs. Vyner called, however, she threw a little damp on my wife's ador. She pretended to praise—she was always more malicious when she did that,

"How very good of you to take all this trouble—so unexpected, too!" she said. "And how very well you did manage, considering you were quite unaccustomed to this sort of thing! It must have been a most formidable undertaking, I'm sure. And I hope you, Mr. Miller, were not very much behind-hand with your work in consequence."

Generally I could give Mrs. Vyner a Roland for her Oliver; but on the present occasion my conscience sided so much with her in her politely-veiled sarcasms—I mean, I thought them so just—that I really could only mutter [illegible] answer.

"I'm afraid you're a little tired with your exertions, Mrs. Miller; indeed, they must have been immense," continued the merciless virago, seeing that I was in no mood [illegible] reply. "But, I'm sure, it was very kind of you to try so hard to give us a pleasant evening [illegible] old friends [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] Your daily [illegible] Mrs. Vyner was gone, when she made a rush to her own room, with a tear in each eye. She had scarcely left us when a double knock announced the postman.

"It is from Wotherspoon," I said, opening the letter. "Do you know I think our new splendors, Jane made you seem a little rude to him, yesterday?"

"Ah well! if I am never rude to any one of more consequence than Mr. Wotherspoon, it will be no great matter," she replied, contemptuously. "But I am grieved and vexed beyond measure about this young Kelly. Ellen Vyner, indeed!"

"Dear me!" said I as I glanced over Wotherspoon's letter, "you will like to hear this, I think, Jane." So I read it to her,

"Dear Miller—I am very sorry to be obliged to leave without calling to bid you good-by, but I have just met some friends who are going to Italy, and I have decided to accompany them. As we start, to-morrow, I am in an awful hurry, and I shall be away at least two years."

"And a very good thing too," interrupted my wife. "Do you know I am quite sure he would have made Patty an offer, last night, if I had not looked so well after her that I never gave him the chance? I have always wondered, James, you never would see the depth of that man. However, we shall be safe from him for some time, it seems"

"Quite safe," said I.

"There were one or two things that I particularly wish to tell you, last night; but in such a crowd I had no opportunity, and"—

"There, I told you James!" broke in my wife again. One of those things, you may depend on it, was a proposal, and I am glad I stopped it."

"All right, only do let me finish—

"And, to tell you the truth, I was a little nettled (you know I was always too sensitive) because I thought Mrs. Miller, last night, scarcely treated me with quite the kindness due to an old friend. So I ran away early and did not say what I intended. Perhaps it is as well. One bit of news about me, however, I am sure you will be glad to hear, and I feel that I ought not to go away without telling you. A few days ago, to my immense delight and astonishment, I received a lawyer's letter informing me that I was heir at-law to a distant relative who had died in Jamaica, so that I have dropped all at once into five thousand a year. Rather jolly, isn't it? But I won't forget all your five pound notes, and if you want a little cash, old fellow, just you ask your old and obliged friend "R. Wotherspoon"

"five thousand a year!" groaned my wife now. "But how could I know, James? Why didn't Mr Wotherspoon tell us?"

"Well, probably dear, because you stopped him so adroitly," said I laughing maliciously, "and perhaps he first wished to see whether we cared for him without his money"

"Oh dear, Oh dear! couldn't I write a note of apology and bring him back?"

"No if I know Wotherspoon, it is too late. As you said, Jane he is too deep for that"

"Ah well," said she quite, piteously "And this is all the reward one gets for putting one's-self out of the way and going to all this expense to give one's friends a treat"

Our motives, I could not help thinking, had not been quite so disinterested as my wife wished to make out. Few people do give parties, I fear, on the pure principles of Pickwickian benevolence. However, we had a lesson, and I am happy to say our first evening party was our last —Every Saturday

To the Hon. the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court, next to be holden at Bangor within and for the County of Penobscot, on the first Tuesday of October next

Charles M. Farnham, of the town of Edinburgh in said county, respectfully libels and gives this honorable Court to be informed, that he was lawfully married to Hannah J Eldridge, his present wife, at Orono, in the county aforesaid, Sept 5th 1868, by whom he has had one child, viz Lewis B Farnham, aged six years, that your libellant has always behaved himself towards his said wife as a true, faithful, indulgent and kind husband, provided her with a good comfortable home and suitable maintenance and support, according to his ability but that she, said libellee, unmindful of her marriage duties and without just cause became alienated in her affections from him, and often neglected and refused to perform her marital duties, or to cohabit with him for months at a time and manifested a strong dislike and hatred of him and otherwise conducted herself in a manner unbecoming a wife and mother

Your libellant further declares and sets forth that although he has thus always treated her the said libellee, with kindness, she by reason of her ungovernable temper, unhappy disposition conduct and feeling toward him, has destroyed the peace of his home the harmony of his marriage relations with her, and rendered his said home miserable full of discord, contention and reproach and bitterness

And he further state that though thus provided with a good home and proper maintenance and support and receiving kind forbearing treatment from your libellant, yet she said libellee left his bed about the 1st of December, 1872 and refused to cohabit with him and so continued until on or about the 15th of February A D 1873 when she left him altogether, and with her said child abandoned his home and went away into parts unknown to him and has never returned at any time since that any communication with him, and is still thus absent in parts unknown, and living in an unlawful manner as he, said libellant, believes Wherefore your libellant prays right and justice and that he may be divorced from the bonds of matrimony now existing between him and the said libellee, and that the custody and education of their said child be entrusted to him, and as in duty bound will ever pray That he has made due inquiry and search for the whereabouts of said libellee, but without avail

CHARLES M FARNHAM

PENOBSCOT Sept. 10, 1874 Personally appeared before me the above named Charles M Farnham, and made oath that he does not know of the whereabouts of his said wife and that he has made all due inquiry as to same
